Martin Artucio is a third generation of dairy farmers in Uruguay. At his farm, Cuchilla Verde, he currently manages the 250 milking Holstein herd, which has been home of many Champions at different shows as he is an active participant with his family, and has bred numerous "EX" cows that are the foundation of his herd and many offspring have been exported to other countries of South America. He studied Veterinary at the University, and back home continued working at the farm, while at the same time starting an A.I. company, Gensur Ltd., which he still manages today with his partners.

He has been a member of the Holstein Association for many years, acting as President for one period and currently being Vice President. Martin started judging many years ago and having judged all of the major Shows in his country, including the Prado National Show twice. He has judged many times in Argentina, Brazil, Ecuador, Mexico, Paraguay, Bolivia, and France. He attended several Judges Conferences in South and North America and is currently Chairman of the Judges Committee. He has been actively involved in marketing US genetics through semen, embryos, and live animals for over 20 years, attending most of the major shows in the U.S., and being able to meet and create many friends during that time.
