Ryan Wolfe grew up on his family's farm, Mar-Am Holsteins in Pine Grove, Pennsylvania, where they currently milk 60 registered Holsteins. From a young age, Ryan developed a keen interest in the genetics and breeding of cattle. He describes himself as an avid student of pedigrees, bulls, bull mothers, and all subsequent aspects of cattle breeding. He is dedicated to breeding Registered Holsteins and is passionate about breeding honest, hard-working cows that scores well and demonstrate longevity.

In 2024, Ryan and his wife Emily assumed ownership of the herd and have since focused on breeding high-quality, well-balanced cows, and enhancing the herd's genetics through strategic mating decisions and embryo transfers.

Since 2020, Ryan has collaborated with NoBull Solutions to provide cattle reproductive services, in addition to managing the farm with support from his wife Emily, brother Ethan, and mother Amy. As a former member of 4-H and FFA, Ryan was actively involved in dairy judging and continues to engage in judging dairy cows.
